

CROWDS CHEER COL. ROOSEVELT IN GOLDEN GATE

Candidate Calls Wilson's Doctrines Ideas of Olden Days.

By THEODORE TILLER.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 15.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt asked only for rest today and the Progressive campaigner was within his rights. The colonel is in Roosevelt territory, in progressive California, and from the hour he entered that State last yesterday until he ran the gamut of thousands who surged about him after the Coliseum meeting last night, the physical powers of the Bull Moose candidate were sorely taxed. He retired at midnight overjoyed with the spontaneity of his Golden Gate ovation, but he was a wearied, hoarse, and rest-seeking man, nevertheless.

After a long sleep the colonel will take an automobile ride this afternoon, hold a few conferences with State Progressive leaders and leave for southern California tonight.

Needed the Rest.

Mr. Roosevelt slept last today, for he had passed the word along to Francis J. Heney, former Governor of Nevada, and other Progressive leaders, that he needed mental and physical recuperation, and no early morning callers disturbed the colonel. Mr. Roosevelt wound up his busy week with a lengthy speech at the Coliseum before a throng which was the most demonstrative of his twelve days' campaigning. In this speech, Mr. Roosevelt went after the "academic doctrine" of Governor Wilson in real Rooseveltian fashion, and California is ringing today with the echoes of the speech.

Mr. Hiram Johnson, wife of the colonel's running mate, occupied a seat on the stage, and participated in the constant cheering which greeted Colonel Roosevelt when he reached here last night.

15,000 Cheer Colonel.

Fifteen thousand men and women crowded into the Coliseum to hear Colonel Roosevelt's speech. Thousands of others struggled for admission outside, bemoaning the fact that the Coliseum would hold no more.

When Colonel Roosevelt entered the building hats and bandannas were waved, the crowd roared, and men and women climbing chairs and yelling themselves into hoarseness, and a blaring band could not be heard above the din.

The cheering lasted for fourteen minutes, only to be renewed when Francis J. Heney, the great prosecutor and Roosevelt champion, arose to introduce the colonel.

Colonel Roosevelt was hailed by cheers when he opened his speech with praise of Governor Johnson and the Progressive laws of California. From that moment on, every thrust at Governor Wilson, Mr. Taft or the bosses of both parties was rapidly applauded. Under the inspiration of a truly sympathetic audience, Colonel Roosevelt delivered a most earnest and telling speech, attacking without gloves what he termed the "academic doctrine" of Governor Wilson as reflected by his recent speech before the New York Press Club.

In part, Colonel Roosevelt said: "The key to Mr. Wilson's position is found in the statement I have quoted, when he says that 'the history of liberty is a history of the limitation of governmental power, not of the increase of it.' This is a bit of outworn academic doctrine which was kept in the schoolroom and the professorial study for a generation after it had been abandoned by all who had experience of actual life."

"It is the laissez faire doctrine of the English political economists three-quarters of a century ago, and it is applied with profit, if anywhere at all, only in a primitive community under primitive conditions, in a community such as the United States at the end of the eighteenth century, a community before the days of Fulton, Morse and Edison."

Enthusiasm Surprising.

Ending the second week of his tour, Colonel Roosevelt entered the fifteenth State last night. Since he turned westward it has been almost like a triumphal journey, gratifying and surprising the colonel himself and his supporters in each of the States visited. Glowing accounts have been sent to the national Progressive headquarters in New York, and it is but frank to say Mr. Roosevelt's confidence in the success of the Progressive movement increases with each day of his swing. In two or three States visited by the Progressive candidate he has had hard fights, even uphill fights.

In the majority of the States visited to date the colonel has an even and in some instances more than an even chance. In Montana the Progressives must overcome the hitherto powerful influence of Amalgamated Copper; in Utah the Mormon vote is against the colonel and the State probably will go for Taft or for Wilson; if the Mormon vote Taft's chances are nil; in Nevada there is strong Democratic sentiment, although some impartial observers including Nevada newspapermen, say the colonel may win since his invasion of the State.

Better Than Even Break.

Elsewhere the colonel has better than an even break at this writing. Taft is not in the running and Wilson's tariff views and his general political views are going to be hurtful on voting day, especially if the colonel delivers a few more speeches like that of last night.

At Reno, Nev., Colonel Roosevelt talked of reclamation, the pure food law, the theft at Chicago convention, and the planks of the Progressive platform. Referring to the pure food law and the reclamation act he said:

"It is only fair to say that neither had a chance of passage until I took hold of them as President and made them Administration measures. There had been valiant work done for both laws by men in and out of Congress, but it had proved wholly impossible to get either through until they were made Administration measures."

When the colonel's train stopped at Colfax, Cal., late yesterday little Miss Evelyn Watts entered the colonel's car and confidentially explained that it was "tag day," that the school house had been taken over by the Progressive Progressive candidate to autograph five tags to be auctioned off. The colonel gave the girl his autograph and $5.00 to aid toward rebuilding the school house.

Taft Orators Second.

Col. Cecil Lyon, traveling political adviser to the colonel, issued a statement in which he scored the Taft managers for sending on the trail of the Progressive candidate orators who have no political influence in their own States. Mr. Lyon referred specifically to John Marshall Harlan and former Congressman J. Adam Bede, of Illinois and Minnesota, respectively, who crossed Colonel Roosevelt's path recently.

"These men are sent out of Illinois and Minnesota because they are known in their own States and are worthless as allies in them, having lost every particle of prestige. At the primaries, eighty delegates of Illinois and Minnesota were carried for Mr. Roosevelt, and only two for Mr. Taft. Both of the States Mr. Roosevelt is certain to carry at the election and Mr. Taft will be third in each of them."

Mr. Lyon said: "Messrs. Harlan and Bede represent Roosevelt States who will have nothing to do with them, so the Taft people are using them elsewhere. Mr. Harlan, of Illinois, is a man of no political influence and supporters and his use by the Taft men is characteristic of the kind of support they are getting. Mr. Harlan was retained by Lorimer's friend Moxley to defend him in suits brought for violating the butler law—this was the bridge that brought him over to the Lorimer interests."

"He is entitled to no more and no less and he is the chief of the expelled Senator. Lorimer and his associates on the Chicago convention are mere falsehoods, which he knows to be falsehoods when he utters them."

SENATE VACANCIES WILL BE NUMEROUS

Retirement of Many Republicans May Lead to Democratic Control of the Upper Branch of the National Legislature—Present Majority Is But Slight.

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER.

That there will be an unprecedented number of vacancies in the United States Senate after March 4, and that the majority of the vacancies will be in seats now held by Republicans, is one of the political probabilities that is commanding the attention of politicians just at present.

It is even predicted that the Senate, on the count of members actually entitled to sit after the next inauguration day, will likely be Democratic by reason of the number of Republicans who will retire without their legislative choice anybody to take their places.

The Senate stands today Republican by only eight majority. There are two Senators to be elected in Illinois, and two in Colorado, with prospects excellent for a huge middle in each State and serious chances of no election.

Each State has a vacancy at present, and in each of the term of the sole sitting Senator will expire on March 4.

The Progressive party is coming in with prospects of holding the balance of power in a number of States. Take Maine. The Legislature was chosen last week. Judge Powers resigned his seat on the bench two years ago to be a Republican candidate for the Senate. The Legislature went Democratic and he was left out. Powers is now a Progressive—says he is, anyhow. The Legislature just chosen has thirty Progressive members, and it is claimed that they hold the balance of power. The Democrats will support Senator Gardner, the Republicans Governor Burleigh. They are figuring up in Maine that the thirty Progressives are not under any obligation to support Burleigh, and that they may support Powers, or divide among various Progressives. In that event an election may be prevented. If Governor-elect Haines, with the State patronage, throws his influence to the Progressives—and it is intimated by the Maine newspapers and politicians that he is going to do just that—then the election of anybody of the Burleigh stripe is additionally unlikely.

New Senator in Massachusetts.

Massachusetts must elect a new Senator in place of Murray Crane, who has taken himself out of it. The Bay Staters have been acting afraid of the cars. Sam McCall took himself out of the Congressional race in his district, supposedly to run for Senator, but he hasn't announced himself, and there is suspicion that he will not. The Democrats claim they will carry the Legislature, but the Massachusetts gerrymander is one of the most intricate and effective, as befits the State where that institution has sinvented, and it gives the Republicans such a strong advantage that the State would have to go to Wilson by a pretty big plurality before the Democrats could seize the Legislature.

In a number of the rural and some of the industrial districts, moreover, the Bull Moose party stands a good prospect of electing members of the Legislature. A large enough number of these to tie up the whole Senatorial election is quite among the possibilities. This would mean a long fight and good chance for March 4 to roll around before anybody had been chosen.

Rhode Island's Senator, Wetmore, has declined to be a candidate to succeed himself. There was talk that Aid- ing would ask to be returned if the Legislature went Democratic. He has denied that he had aspirations, and yet he is not to be taken off for a moment from the time being at least. There is a long row of aspirants on both the Democratic and the Republican side of the aisle, and it is not unlikely that they are likely to hold the balance of power.

New Jersey will need to elect a Senator in place of Briggs, stand-pat Republican. Governor Wilson has declared against James Smith, Jr., who was elected to the House to run for the Senate, and is supposed to be the Wilson candidate. He was one of the Wilson floor leaders in the Baltimore convention, and back of that was one of the most efficient workers for the Jersey governor in the contest for delegates. Jersey's legislature is a problem with, once more, the chance that it will be very close. The Progressives will have a weight far out of proportion to their numbers. It will be recalled that Senator John Fairfield Dryden was finally beaten because a single Republican Independent refused flatly to stand for him. New Jersey is used to that sort of close fight and has every prospect of one this time.

West Virginia is alive with Bull Moose sentiment, and there is a certain bunch of legislators of that persuasion. Clarence Watson, Democrat and incumbent, seems to regard it as all certain. The Democrats are determined to elect him, and they will divide it up, and a long, bitter fight is being planned. In Illinois, Judge Lawrence Y. Sherman took the Republican nomination away from Cullom, and "Jim Ham"

Lewis got the Democratic nomination. Nobody knows how the entanglement, due to the fact that a second vacancy was produced after the nominations, by the election of Lorimer from the Senate, will be handled—nobody yet knows. The State will be terrifically mixed, with the new party running like wildfire and certain to get a considerable number, very likely a pivotal strength, in the legislature.

In Wyoming, Senator Warren, despite the perfection of his machine and the long establishment of his power, has a big fight ahead. Governor Carey is fighting Warren and the whole north side of the State is reported in revolt against Warren. Once more the Progressives are expected to get a showing in the legislature that will compel serious consideration of their claims. In North Carolina, Governor Bickett has the right of his re-election, while the Progressives are active all over the State and the Democrats claim they will control the Legislature. Probably the Democrats will not do that, but if the third party comes in with respectability, strength in the Legislature, a majority for either regular Democrat or regular Republican will be impossible.

Kansas and Nebraska are not likely to be deadlocked, according to present advice. Nebraska has the Oregon plan which pretty nearly assures the selection of a Senator and makes deadlocks impossible. That is one of the good things about the Oregon plan. It will likely save both Oregon and Nebraska from bad misuses, for in each the situation is such that, under ordinary circumstances, the legislature would be pretty certain to be split into factions and a long fight precipitated. In North Carolina, it is just beginning to be realized, there is a situation that promises great difficulty in choosing a Senator; the State is developing a tremendous Progressive strength, and there are three Democratic candidates for the Senatorial nomination. Tennessee chooses its successor, New Mexico, and the situation there is so utterly mixed that all bets are off—and away it goes for a good many weeks after election. Sanders is a Republican, named to fill a vacancy.

It will be observed that most of the places where deadlocks may intervene the States now represented by Republicans. There is little prospect, save in North Carolina, of delay in selecting Senators who will be Democrats succeeding Democrats. Thus the Democratic party stands to hold about all it now has, while the Republicans will be the victims in most of the possible deadlocks.

Discharged, Shoots Four.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Sept. 15.—John Keeler, a discharged driver of the Clearfield Brewing Company, shot and fatally injured Joseph W. Rosner, owner of the brewery, and also shot M. R. Ogden, a bookkeeper; Joseph Kirschner, brewmaster, and George Carson, another employee, inflicting wounds from which they will recover.

HOTEL STRIKE WILL BE FINISH FIGHT

Leader of Boston Labor Disturbance Threatens to Extend Battle.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—Edward Blochinger, national organizer for the striking hotel workers, predicted that the strike would spread to other large cities of the East, after returning from his trip to New York.

"We are fully prepared to continue the fight now on in Boston," he asserted. "There will be no let-up from now on. The defiance of our union by the hotel people will be dealt with as it deserves."

"Our general executive committee will send three experienced organizers from New York tomorrow. These men immediately will proceed to form new unions the country over."

In a short time, we will be prepared to call a general strike from the Atlantic to the Pacific if the necessity for such action exists.
